Exclusive Is Over!

A Collection of 6 of the Sermons in the series "I Do Believe", and the sermon "The God Who Never Gives Up On Us" from the sermon series "If God Be For Us...", preached from the pulpit of Christ Community Church during the situation of conflict in which the Classis of Muskegon, the local judicatory of the Reformed Church in America, challenged the theological perspective of Richard A. Rhem regarding the extent of God's grace. Claiming that the Reformed confessional position required the view that God's saving grace is available only through Jesus Christ, the Classis called on Richard Rhem to recant his view that God's revelation and God's grace are manifested beyond the confines of the Christian tradition.

In these messages, Rhem probes the Christian founding story, pointing out that the early Jesus movement was a Jewish movement and that the conflict situations recorded in the New Testament are intra-Jewish.

In John 5, the parents of the man born blind whose sight Jesus restores, refuse to acknowledge the miracle for fear of being "put out of the synagogue"; Stephen accuses the temple leadership of repeating the sins of their forebears who killed the prophets; Paul's vision that Gentiles need not be circumcised nor keep the dietary laws was tempered by James' concern that the Jewish community following Jesus remain observant; Peter's vision wherein he heard God's voice calling him to embrace what formerly he had considered unclean, prepared him for his encounter with the Gentile Cornelius, who, in Peter's presence, received the gift of the Holy Spirit.

Revisiting these stories, Richard Rhem points out the relative adequacy of the respective religious institutional structures and faith formulations. He insists, however, they are "human containers" – adequate, but never absolute.

The central insight of the Reformation of the 16th century was that the Church must be ever in process of reforming, of being re-formed by the word of God – not simply a biblical text, but the biblical text heard within the long tradition of the Church in the present context of human experience. The Church continually fails to live up to this ideal. Again and again, fresh insights and new forms are frozen, absolutized and treated as the last word, quenching the Spirit.

God's Spirit is the Spirit of freedom and the story of the people of God is the story of the Spirit shattering "our little systems," creating newness. In a world marked by global consciousness, Richard Rhem declares that Exclusivism is over. That is not a fact to be feared; rather, an occasion to find a fresh translation for the Good News that appeared in Jesus Christ, with confidence that God has a grander scheme.

From his mentor, Hendrikus Berkhof, Rhem adopted Tennyson's lines as the hallmark of his theological reflection:

*Our little systems have their day,
They have their day and cease to be.
They are but broken lights of Thee,
And Thou, O Lord, art more than they.*
